

For my quest is more of a fashion one it’s shorter, but the user has full control on the character they pick and the outfits they choose for them. First, would be the user to choose their character. Next, it would be the set of clothes, and the user can choose from. Finally, it would be the final set for that character. All the clothes may be different depending on the character which gets the user to want to see the different outfits.